

ABSTRACT

A casing for an energy storage device, including a structural shell defining a void
5 area suitable for containing an energy storage device, and an inner lining substantially impervious to oxygen and humidity. The inner lining includes at least one layer of synthetic material secured onto the inner surface of the structural shell.
The structural shell is made of reinforced plastic or polymer material.